

What is nothing?

I have a weird little obsession with the word nothing. I don't really know when or how it happened. I guess there was a saying. "If you stare into the abyss, the abyss stares back at you."

We associate the word nothing with emptiness, darkness or lack of something. But I am looking from the other perspective, I see this lack of something as potential.

What I mean to say is that nothingness is the most immense potential of existence and is a primary infinity. Like a pot is molded out of clay, our reality is molded out of nothingness.

We could also look at nothingness mathematically. A number that could represent it already exists, and that is 0. That is why we can't divide with this number. And if we would put nothingness on a graph, it would be a line that infinity from functions comes close to but can never reach it.

And that is our meaning of life, our purpose, reaching for something we can never fully reach. Because this line 0 is our existence, experiencing itself. Are you ready to repeat every moment of your life for the rest of eternity?
